English Courses Satisfying Prerequisite Requirements:

Any course offered by an English department will satisfy the pre-requisite requirement for English courses.

“Writing intensive courses” will also satisfy the pre-requisite requirement for an English course. A writing intensive course is one in which both subject matter and English composition are evaluated as part of the grade.

If you completed a course that was writing intensive and it is not stipulated as such on your college transcript, you will need either a letter from the professor stating that the course was classified as writing intensive or a letter from the Chair of the English department stating that the course was equivalent to an English composition course. This letter would need to be on college letterhead and signed by the Chair of the English department. Please have the letter writer mail the letter to:
